

Heartbreak Waltz 2007

A Story of Love, Loss and Living

E. FRED CARLISLE

For Dick Nolan (Canon Nolan)

I'm so grateful that you read this in manuscript — and especially your kind remembrance of Barbara's death and my struggle. So with warmth & affection,

Fred Carlisle
August 2009

18/50 Commemorative hardcovers

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I am deeply appreciative of the countless ways my daughters, Lindy, Becky, Ginny, and Janey, supported and cared for me and attended to Barbara during the years of her disease—five and ½ years of periodic health but of constant and more and more apparent illness—and then after her death. Barbara's daughter, Andrea—whom Barbara loved and cherished beyond expression—was devoted and caring throughout. Barbara's sister, Anne, gave Barbara strong support and love, especially near the end. And I appreciate, as well, Fritz and Gretchen's (brother and sister-in-law) attentiveness.

I appreciate greatly the family members and many friends (both Barbara's and mine) who read my manuscript at various stages and offered advice and support. Family: Andrea Rutledge, Anne Franklin, Ginny Quintanilla, and Fritz and Gretchen Saenger. Friends: Howard Anderson, Julie Avery, Lori Breece, Betsy Brinson, Gordon Davies, Lloyd and Nancy Gardner, Tom and Laura Gardner, Elyzabeth Holford, Anne Moore, Dick Nolan, Cheryl Royce, Bob Siegle, Tom Stachnik, and Edward Weisband.

I am grateful to Marilyn Raymond, Barbara's medical oncologist, for the way she cared for Barbara and cared about her. I am also grateful to Barry Lerner, Barbara's Hospice physician, for his sensitivity and support during Barbara's last months. His Yellow Team was very helpful, as well. I also appreciate deeply my year of conversations with Rod Burk, my Hospice bereavement counselor.

I value, as well, the attention of so many others who visited, called, or wrote Barbara—or wrote about her—and then afterwards, the friends who called or wrote to me in sympathy.

I appreciate, once again, Judy and Bruce Borich, my publishers, for their skillful, thoughtful, and friendly support.